Hello GCC Students,

We hope you're all staying safe during this difficult time. Your safety is our top priority, and we are working to expand the list of support and resources available.

While we continue to evaluate the current situation, GCC is extending the campus closure to ensure a safe return for everyone. As of now, the campus will remain closed through Tuesday, January 14. Classes and services will continue to be held remotely (Zoom). While air quality is improving and we're getting the campus ready to welcome you back, we still need more time to assess everything.

If you are a student in immediate need, GCC CARES is here to help you and connect you to the right resources.

- The GCC CARES Market will reopen next week for students who need food and/or hygiene products. We ask students to make an appointment via glendale.edu/Market at their preferred location. The CARES Market will be open at the Garfield Campus on Monday, January 13 & Tuesday, January 14 and at the Civic Auditorium on Wednesday, January 15 & Thursday, January 16.
- Students who have lost their homes due to the fires are encouraged to complete a GCC CARES Intake Form, and our case managers will contact you with available resources. A GCC CARES case worker will contact you to discuss available resources. The intake form can be found by clicking here.

We understand that this situation is causing a lot of stress, and we're here to support you however we can. If you feel the need to talk or process what is happening, please remember that you have 24/7 free access to counseling support through TimelyCare. Simply log in using your GCC student email. If you need assistance accessing these resources, our team is here to help.

Please take care of yourselves. For the latest updates on campus operations, emergency resources, and support services, visit glendale.edu/fires.

Stay safe, and know we're thinking of you.
